GENERAL REVIEW.

H. W. Rogers, Esq., President:

Sir,—It is always pleasing in recalling the history of the past, whether of personal or public affairs, to find that at least a fair degree of success has attended the efforts or the enterprises in which we may have been engaged; and in reviewing the general business interests of the country for the year just closed, while it cannot be said to have been a year of exceptional or of uniform prosperity, yet there are abundant causes for congratulation that on the whole the outcome has been encouraging, reasonably satisfactory, and eminently inspiring of confidence for the future. It is true that our general harvests have been less prolific than for any of the late years, and in some sections, especially in portions of Illinois, this failure has assumed the proportions of a positive calamity. Still, measuring the diminished production by the enhanced salable value of most agricultural productions, it appears that as an aggregate for the country the crops of 1881 have more of money value than those of any former year. The Agricultural Department at Washington estimates the value to the farmer of the product of Wheat, Corn, Oats, Rye and Barley grown in 1881 at $1,459,661,395, against $1,332,815,-216 as the value of these crops in 1880, and $1,237,271,528 in 1879, all previous years being still less; but as a very large percentage of these cereals is consumed by the producers themselves it cannot be assumed that they as an aggregate are benefited by the advance in values to the extent these figures might seem to indicate. Indeed, it is quite probable the surplus of these grains available for sale from the harvests of 1881 is of essentially less value to the producer than was the surplus of the years immediately preceding. A general failure in the outturn of crops usually means a largely reduced tonnage movement by the railway lines of the country, and curtailed purchases of supplies from the merchant; these consequences have not, however, as yet been realized to any considerable extent as the result of the partial failure of the agricultural industry in the past year. Diminished harvests in this country, together with more bounteous ones in Europe, have had the effect to reduce the export movement of cereals from the equivalent of 293,419,124 bushels, valued at $275,936,859, during the calender year of 1880, to 224,243,843 bushels, valued at $223,118,560, in 1881, essentially modifying the condition of the foreign exchange market and creating some apprehension that we may ere long be obliged to resort to the export of the precious metals for the payment of balances due from us on the exchange of commodities other than specie, or that at least the extraordinary flow of specie to our shores which has existed during the past few years may wholly cease. This apprehension need not, however, necessarily disturb the financial affairs of the country, as we are in a much stronger position in respect to specie supply than at any former period, holding, as is shown by authentic statements published herewith (page 23), more of coin than any nation of Europe with the single exception of France; and with our annual production of gold and silver to the extent of from $70,000,000 to $80,000,000 we may be considered reasonably safe as against any temporary turn in the course of trade balances. At the present writing the indications, so far as there can be any at this season of the year, are most propitious in respect to the success of agricultural industry in the ensuing year, and as our ability, with abundant harvests, to successfully compete for the supplying of food to European countries is fully demonstrated by the developments of the past few years, it appears to be exceedingly probable that the diminution in the volume of this trade will be only temporary. That the cheapness with which cereals can usually be produced in the Western States, supplemented by the reduced cost of moving them to the seaboard and of ocean carrying charges, will cause them to supersede in European markets, and especially in those of England, the products of home industry, is rapidly coming to be an acknowledged fact, as is attested by expressions of the public press and by the numerous representatives of European governments sent to this country to investigate and report upon the character and extent of our present and prospective agricultural development, all of whom seem to be particularly charged with the duty of ascertaining whether or not we have reached the minimum of cost in placing our products in their markets. As illustrating this sensitiveness to American competition a single extract from many of similar import may here suffice. "The Miller," a journal of wide and influential circulation published in London, in its issue of October 13, 1881, treating of "British Farmers, Past and Present," concludes its able review of them as follows: "The improvement in steam navigation, the systematic policy of the American Government in favoring to the utmost all their agricultural producers, has, in an economic sense, placed the American freehold wheat-grower but a little way off from the British rent-paying wheat-grower. The competition has thus been narrowed down to a mere matter of arithmetic, and unless the whole economic conditions of his position are radically and promptly modified the British farmer will before long become as extinct, as a wheat-grower, as the yeoman whom he in some measure represents. Protection under the guise of reciprocity or free trade has been passionately invoked on his behalf, but it must be clear to all but the most willfully blind that under no circumstances can bread in this country be again taxed; and if the British farmer is to survive among us his rescue must be effected by other agencies than those which withered away before the righteous wrath of the Corn Law Reform League."

Just how or from whence the rescue must come, if at all, this writer only intimates, but seems to imply that he saw no remedy for the impoverishing prospects of the British farmer except by radical concession on the part of the land owner, but the past as well as the current history of the British landed proprietor affords small promise of voluntary concessions even to save to himself a frugal, honest, and industrious tenantry. As indicating the views of a remedy for his condition entertained by the British farmer himself, we have the substantial fact that during the years 1889 and 1881 over 325,000 immigrants from Great Britain landed in the United States, a very large proportion of whom can, and doubtless will, soon be engaged with profit in growing wheat on their own lands to take the place of that which they would have grown at home, could they have been induced to longer submit to the policy of producing the kernel for the landlord and the husk for themselves.

Immigration to the United States from all quarters of the globe has been in unprecedented volume during the past year, the grand aggregate being swollen to 720,045 souls; an excess over the previous year of over 126,000; those arriving in 1881 exceeding in numbers the population of any one of twelve states in the Union. The most notable features of the immigration movement of the year, as compared with 1880, are the facts that while that from Germany increased to the extent of 115,532, and from China by 13,700, that from Canada decreased 44,573, and from Ireland 13,890, and also that of the 720,045 arriving, 461,131 landed at the port of New York, being a larger increase over those arriving at that port in 1880 than the whole increase of arrivals in the country.

The export trade in provisions shows a marked decline as compared with 1880, the decrease being mainly in hog product, the aggregate of which, including barreled pork, bacon, hams and lard, amounted to fully 315,000,000 lbs., or over 23½ per cent less than the exports of the same in 1880. This diminution of trade is largely due to the senseless and wicked reports industriously circulated by the continental press in respect to the healthfulness of American hog product, and for these, governments, in the insane desire to protect the home product,—however oppressively the policy might be to consumers were largely responsible. The home demand for these products has been such that the loss of so large a portion of the export trade has been scarcely felt in the markets, but should the restrictions on this movement continue, it cannot be doubted that its effect will be highly injurious to the country. It certainly ought to be expected of those especially interested in this trade that they see to it that the quality of these goods exported shall be of a character above criticism, so far as the careful, cleanly and judicious handling and preparation of them is concerned; the quality and healthfulness of the animals from which they are manufactured, it is now conceded by all the experts who have been sent hither to investigate the subject, will compare favorably with those grown in any part of the world. As this city is by far the largest point for the manufacture of these meats, and hence has a larger interest in the prosperity of the trade in them than any other, it follows that our packers and dealers should be especially vigilant to secure and maintain for them the reputation of a high degree of excellence; that a conscientious effort is being made to accomplish this, no one familiar with the facts will for a moment question.

The total foreign trade of the country has been less in value than that of 1880 by over $80,000,000; the balance on exchanges of merchandise has been $163,396,226 in 1881, against $192,876,246 in 1880, both in favor of the United States, or rather, our sales of merchandise to foreign countries have exceeded our purchases from them in the two years by the amounts named.

The financial affairs of the country have been maintained in a condition of great prosperity. The revenues of the government have been more largely in excess of its current expenses than in any previous year of its history, the surplus being appropriated to the actual payment of the public debt to the extent of $102,611,777, and still leaving in the national treasury at the close of the year $31,078,241 more than it held at the close of 1880. In addition to this a reduction in the interest charge of the public debt has been effected to the extent of over $16,327,000 per annum; this has been accomplished partly by the payments alluded to, but more as a result of the successful attempt by the Treasury Department to reduce the rate of interest on a large portion of the outstanding bonds of the Government. None of the bonds of the United States, except those issued to railways, now bear interest exceeding 41/2 per cent while the whole averages less than 3_{100}^{*} per cent per annum, an accomplishment in the way of financial achievement which would have been deemed impossible but a few years since. The status of the debt assumed by the Government in aid of the several Pacific Railway lines is by no means satisfactory to the people whose credit was pledged, and whose bonds were issued for the benefit of those lines. Instead of the gradual accumulation of a sinking fund to ultimately retire these bonds, as should have been required and rigidly enforced, it is observable that the Government has actually advanced within the past ten years over $26,745,000 to meet the annual interest charge upon them, and this during a period when the stockholders have been absorbing a large portion of the earnings of the lines by dividends assumed to be made from net earnings.

The agricultural interests of the country have, as previously intimated, been less prosperous than in late previous years; the seasons seemed largely disarranged, at one time excessive moisture and again almost unprecedented drought in many sections of the country wrought havoc with the crops, and reduced the outturn of product many hundreds of millions of bushels. While all estimates of the annual production of cereals in this country are more or less unreliable — as witness the census report taken from each farmer separately, and the Agricultural Department report of the crops of 1879, published at pages 16 and 17 of this report — it is still conceded by all that the shrinkage of product in the crops of 1881 resulting from climatic or weather influences has been very great, all cereal crops having suffered in greater or less degree, but especially those of wheat and corn.

The Agricultural Department at Washington estimates the yield of wheat in the country for 1881 at only 10^{11}_{10} bushels per acre, and of corn at but 18^{16}_{10} bushels, while its estimate of the same crops for 1880 was, for wheat 13^{11}_{10} and for corn 27^{15}_{10} bushels per acre. The Northwestern States, and especially Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, were the principal sufferers, the crops in Illinois by this report being reduced from 60,958,000 bushels of wheat and 240,452,000 bushels of corn in 1880, to 26,822,000 bushels of wheat and 176,733,000 bushels of corn in 1881. The estimate of the State Agricultural Department places both these crops in the state at even less, and places the corn product of two counties in which 53,261 acres was planted at absolutely nothing, and in several others estimates the yield at but one bushel per acre; such results if they were of frequent recurrence would be disheartening, but fortunately they are exceedingly rare.

Our own city has enjoyed an unprecedentedly high degree of prosperity and of business activity throughout the year. Never in its history has it been the recipient of so many favoring influences radiating in every direction and tending to bring it into prominence as a great and growing commercial center. Our population has been largely augmented by enterprising and intelligent accessions, who have come among us to stay, and who will essentially assist in promoting the best interests of the city by becoming active participants in the development of its industries and business possibilities. But few come among us who desire a life of useless idleness, as the atmosphere of the city is by no means congenial to their tastes. A tendency to action, prompt, vigorous and effective, seems to have become the ruling impulse of the older residents, and is speedily infused into the new arrivals in the city. Perhaps a somewhat too thorough absorption in business affairs may be considered a characteristic of most of our citizens, but while this may in some measure be destructive to the physical organization of the individual, it is that which has largely contributed to make the city the prodigy and marvel of modern times. Only ten years have elapsed since the business portion of the city was laid in ashes, but to-day there is scarcely a trace of that overwhelming calamity remaining to mark the path of its devastating career. Our population has nearly doubled since then, and business has fully kept pace with the increasing numbers to claim a share in its prosecution. Building enterprises, both for private residence and for business purposes, are still pressed on every hand, the so-called business center absorbing square after square of territory which a few years since was considered entirely too remote to be deemed at all appropriate for such purposes. It is a source of mortification that public or municipal improvements cannot be made to keep pace with the necessities of the people in this respect. Constitutional limitations and the prevailing absurd system of valuing property for purposes of taxation, by which it is rated in the assessments at but little, if anything, over one quarter of its actual worth, positively prohibit the raising of sufficient revenue by legitimate processes to meet reasonable demands for expenditures by the municipal government in the interest of the public. As illustrating the hampered condition in which State legislation—enacted in the interest of those whose highest aim in life seems to be to evade their just burdens of legitimate public expenses — has placed the city, it may be stated that in the years 1873 and 1874 the valuations of real and personal property upon which taxes for municipal purposes was levied exceeded \$300,000,000, which it was well known was far below its actual cash value; upon this valuation a tax of $1\frac{8}{10}$ per cent was levied, producing a revenue of about \$5,500,000 for municipal purposes. Those assessments were made by the city authorities and for city taxation alone, and were in every way within legal limits. Since 1874 the actual value of real and personal property within the city has certainly increased 25 per cent, and could not to-day be honestly assessed under the plain reading of the law on the subject at much, if anything, under \$400,000,-000, and at the same rate of taxation as prevailed in 1874 should produce a revenue of over \$7,000,000, a sum quite unnecessary to meet the true requirements of the city government. Instead of this, however, our present incongruous, vicious and dishonest system of valuations, after being increased by the shuffling of the so-called State Board of Equalization by 20 per cent or more, presents an aggregate of taxable basis of but a trifle over \$116,000,000. Upon this, even by carrying the rate of taxation to the very verge of constitutional prohibition, but little over \$4,000,000 of revenue can be realized, and the city gets the credit of suffering a burden of taxation of about 3½ per cent upon the value of all the property within its limits, as stated by the officers of the State, sworn to make an assessment based on the actual cash value of all property assessed. Various devices are discussed by means of which their advocates seek to place it within the power of the municipal government to secure funds to carry forward needed improvements, but few, however, advocate the true position that the people are fully able and most of them quite willing to pay each his proper share of all that is really needed in this regard. Perhaps the most pernicious of all the suggested schemes is that of asking the people of the State to so modify the State constitution as that the city of Chicago may enjoy the high privilege of running into debt. A simple act of the Legislature would restore to the people of the city their constitutional right to tax themselves for municipal purposes to as great an extent as there is any occasion for doing; and with the well known fact that those to whom are intrusted the power to expend public money are usually far more prudent in making appropriations of funds to be drawn directly from their constituents in taxes than in cases where such appropriations are based on the proceeds of loans, the payment of which does not present itself as a matter of present concern, it would seem that sound policy dictates that the restrictions on the debt-making power should not be disturbed unless a greater emergency should arise than at present exists. The commercial and industrial interests of the city have perhaps the most vital interest in a proper administration of municipal affairs, as upon this, to a very considerable extent, hinges business prosperity; and while they should insist upon the prompt prosecution of all really necessary public improvements they should be equally solicitous that sufficient funds to defray these expenditures are wisely and legally provided and that all public money is honestly, economically and judiciously expended.

The trade of the city during the past year in almost everylline, except in agricultural products,— this exception being wholly attributable to diminished production on account of the causes previously referred to,— has been of larger volume than in any year hitherto, and as a whole has been conducted with highly satisfactory results. As indicating in some measure the growth of commercial transactions in this city within the past five years, although it is not claimed to be a fully reliable index of that increase, it is noticable that the clearings of the associated banks of the city, which in 1877 aggregated $1,044,678,475, have risen to $1,725,684,894 in 1880 and $2,249,097,450 in 1881, much more than doubling in the five years.

Manufacturing establishments both in the city and in the adjoining suburbs have been generally actively employed, and their numbers and variety have sensibly increased. The impossibility of making intelligent or valuable estimates as to the number, character or extent of the manufacturing enterprises of the city, and also as to the details of its general mercantile trade from any data available, deters random speculations in respect to them.

The trade in agricultural products although less in volume than that of 1880 has been of more money value than in any previous year. Statements more or less in detail as to the movement of these to and from the city are published herewith as usual.

A somewhat careful estimate of the value of products of the farm shipped from this city during the year is as follows:

Flonr and Grain	$93,750,000
Live Stock	79,500,000
Meats, Lard, Tallow and Dressed Hogs	102,725,000
Butter and Cheese	14,700,000
Wool and Hides	28,500,000
Seeds and Broom Corn	8,250,000°
Distilled Spirits, not including tax	3,750,000
Miscellaneous Products	9,500,000
A total of	$340,675,000
Corresponding estimate for 1880	305,400,000

Corresponding estimate for 1879
Corresponding estimate for 1878
Corresponding estimate for 1877	218 400 000

In making the above estimates reference was had to qualities, as near as could be ascertained from available sources, and to current values at the time the property left the city. It is not claimed that the statement is or can be made entirely accurate; a close approximation is all that has been attempted in the calculations.

FLOUR.

The receipts of Flour at this point were very much larger than in any previous year, aggregating the equivalent of 4,815,239 barrels, a portion of which was received in sacks. Of the entire receipts about 1,000,000 barrels were consigned to this city only, the remainder having been billed through and simply transferred from one railway line to another. The amount consigned to Chicago only does not, however, by any means measure the city's trade in flour, as a very considerable portion of the through shipments were, as in former years, sold in this market. The trade in flour in this city is quite insignificant in volume as compared with that in wheat. Flour is usually sold but once on the floor of the exchange, while daily transactions in wheat by numerous resales frequently aggregate more in quantity than all the wheat sold as flour amounts to in a year. Prices have ruled more steady than those of wheat, though in general sympathizing more or less with the tone of the wheat market. All flour is now sold in this market by sample or by well known brand, the attempt at classification by inspected grade inaugurated some years since having been abandoned as being impracticable in dealing with the almost infinite variety of flour manufactured in the Western states.

It is especially noticeable that a constantly increasing percentage of the wheat crop of the Northwestern States is being converted into flour near the point of production. The superior facilities for its manufacture at several points in Minnesota, especially at the city of Minneapolis—which has a manufacturing capacity capable of absorbing about all the surplus wheat produced in the State—the high reputation of Minnesotamade flour, and the usually preferential through freight rates made on flour as compared with the grain, offer strong inducements for the marketing of wheat in that form. The export trade in flour during the past year has been substantially the same as in 1880, aggregating 6,715,837 barrels against 6,763,165 the previous year. This, in connection with the fact that the exports of wheat in 1881 were less than 64 per cent of those of 1880, indicates the growing favor in which American flours are held abroad, notwithstanding the efforts made in some European countries to prejudice the people against its use on the false allegation that it is adulterated by foreign substances.

WHEAT.

The Wheat crop of 1881 was a lamentable failure in the best wheat districts of the United States. The aggregate deficit in the States of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa as compared with the harvest of 1880 is little, if anything, short of 100,000,000 bushels, more than one-third of which falls upon the State of Illinois. The receipts at Chicago have been 14,824,990 bushels, against 23,541,607 in 1880. Converting flour to its equivalent in wheat leaves the comparison less alarming, that mode of calculation giving 36,493,565 bushels as received in 1881, against 38,010,858 bushels so re-The receipts prior to August 1 (crop of 1880) were, flour reduced to wheat about 4,700,000 in excess of the corresponding time 1880, but in wheat alone they were over 1,500,000 bushels less, flour having come forward in nearly twice the volume that it did in the early part of the previous year. The increasing tendency to convert wheat into flour in the West warns the speculative element, so largely operating in wheat, that the basis of their operations appears to be melting away, and suggests whether a better field for operation may not be found by paying some attention to the manufacturing commodity as well as to the raw material alone. The quality of the wheat received has been of a lower average than in 1880. Of the Spring Wheat received by rail and going into elevators in 1880, 26,366 cars inspected No. 2 or above, and 13.182 cars below No. 2, while in 1881 but 17.748 cars inspected No. 2 or above, and 13,-305 cars inspected below No. 2. During the last three months of the year very much more than half has graded below No. 2. The receipts of Winter Wheat have been but little over fifteen per cent of those of the previous year, that crop having suffered more, relatively, than the Spring Wheat did. The course of prices has in the main been a steady advance, substantially reversing the order, in this respect, of the market of No. 2 Spring opened at about 98 cents at the beginning of 1881, reached 121 in July, since which it has ruled above that figure, having advanced to 143 in October, and at the close of the year was selling at about 128 in store. No. 3 Spring ranged about ten cents per bushel below No. 2 early in the year, but since the new wheat came in the difference has been greater, at times reaching fully fifteen cents. Stocks in the city elevators have been kept large, though not up to the average so held in 1880. the close of the year they are but little over half what they were at its beginning. one time in the summer a portion of the wheat in the elevators became impaired in condition to such an extent that it had to be posted in order to secure its removal from store, which was promptly done with comparatively small loss. Speculative operations in this grain have been carried on to an unprecedented extent, mainly in the interest of parties not resident of the city. Never in the past history of the Board of Trade have its members been so overwhelmed with orders of this character, many houses being obliged to largely increase their clerical force to meet the demands upon their services, and in not a few instances business, otherwise desirable, was declined because of inability to properly attend to and care for it.

The Winter Wheat sowings of the autumn at the present time are in exceedingly fine condition throughout the Western States, and, unless something unfavorable intervenes, promise all that could be desired. The flattering prospects in this regard have had a weakening tendency on prices during the closing few weeks of the year. Foreign advices do not indicate a prospective demand, for what surplus we may still have of the last crop, at the exaggerated prices, many have believed it could be disposed of for. Liverpool quotations of American Spring Wheat at the close of the year are but about 15 to 16 cents per bushel higher than a year ago, while in Chicago it is about 30 cents higher.

The stocks in store at the principal points of accumulation in this country are nearly 11,000,000 bushels less than a year since.

CORN

The receipts of Corn, 78,393,315 bushels, have been less by 18,879,529 bushels than those of 1880. The average quality of the receipts has been very much below that of the previous year, about four times as much grading below No. 2 as in 1880, on a materially less aggregate. This was largely due to the imperfect protection given that in cribs from the heavy snows and excessive rains of last winter and spring. The crop of the country for 1881 is estimated at over 500,000,000 bushels less than that of 1880, but it is by no means certain that a scale of prices can be maintained which this rather startling fact might seem to indicate as likely to prevail. There is undoubtedly a very considerable quantity of corn of former crops still remaining in the country; this, coupled with the largely reduced home consumption during the present as compared with last winter, owing to the character of the two seasons, may prove to be of sufficient importance to sensibly affect both future deliveries and the course of prices. The exports in 1881 were over 40,000,000 bushels less than in 1880. Liverpool quotations, December 31, 1881, are about 5½ cents per bushel higher than a year since; in Chicago they are about 26 cents higher. During the year prices steadily advanced, almost without interruption, until early in October, when 76 cents was reached. This was, however, but a spasmodic attainment and soon a more natural status was reached, the market since ruling between 57 and 63 cents for No. 2, closing at about the outside.

OATS.

The receipts of Oats have been larger than ever before, aggregating 24,861,538 bushels. The movement prior to the incoming of the new crop was unusually free, receipts in May and June reaching nearly 8,500,000 bushels. Prices steadily appreciated from about 31 cents in January to 45 cents per bushel at the close of July. The new crop, which in the country seems to be substantially the same in product as that of 1880, has not made its appearance in the Chicago market to the extent which the crop of 1880 did prior to the close of that year. Prices during the autumn have ruled about 15 cents per bushel higher than for the corresponding time in 1880, but have not kept pace with those of corn; these two grains, on account of their interchangeability in use, being usually subject to similar influences as to price. The inspections of the new crop indicate a considerably lower quality or condition than the receipts of the corresponding time in 1880.

RYE.

There is nothing special to note in respect to this grain, the receipts of which have been 1,363,552 bushels, about 500,000 bushels less than the previous year. Prices have ruled between 88 and 120 cents per bushel for No. 2, the highest point having been reached in April, resulting largely from a demand for shipment southward. The stock in store after April did not reach 100,000 bushels until the new crop began to move, and for several weeks was kept below 30,000 bushels; at the close of the year it was 408,938, about one-third larger than a year before. The crop of the country is about 16 per cent less than the previous year, and the smallest since 1876.

BARLEY.

The receipts of Barley for the year have been 5,695,358 bushels. The trade has been subject to comparatively little fluctuation in price, and was mainly for consumption by city brewers and maltsters, or for immediate shipment to other points. The quality of the home grown crop was rather inferior, but that grown east of the Rocky Mountains was fully equal in quantity to the crop of 1880. The California crop was about 4,000,000 bushels short of the previous year, which practically represents the shortage of the whole country. The Canadian crop was larger than in 1880, and of much better quality than that grown in the central Western States. About 900,000 bushels of Canadian barley was received at Chicago during the year, that arriving by rail mostly clearing the Custom House at Port Huron or Detroit. Comparatively little barley is now sold by grade in elevators, both buyers and sellers preferring to deal by sample. What trading there has been for lots in store has been mostly in No. 3. The manufacture of malt for sale as such has grown to be an important industry in Chicago, the excess of shipments of malt over receipts during the year, which practically represents the manufacture in the city over the local brewing and distilling consumption, was about 1,500,000 bushels. The stocks in regular elevators at the close of the year were 372,721 bushels; probably as much more was held in private storage by brewers and maltsters.

LIVE STOCK AND MEAT PACKING.

The following shows the numbers of the different kinds of Live Stock received at the Union Stock Yards of this city, and the aggregate value of the same, during each of the past five years, as reported by Mr. Geo. T. Williams, secretary of the Union Stock. Yards Company:

Years.	Cattle and Calves,	Hogs,	Sheep,	Horses,	Aggregate
	Number.	Number.	Number.	Number.	Value.
1881	1,215,732	6,474,844	493,624	12,909	$183,007,710
1880		7.059,355	335,810	10,398	143,057,626
1879		6,448,330	325,119	10,473	114,795,834
1878		6,339,654	310.420	9,415	106,101,879
1877		4,025,970	310,240	7,874	99,024,100

It will be observed that the above is an increase for 1881 over 1880 in all kinds of stock except Hogs, with an increase in aggregate value of over $40,000,000. The demand for Cattle, Hogs and Sheep has been remarkably steady; the supply, large as it has been, scarcely ever exceeding the ready requirements of purchasers at prices essentially higher than prevailed in 1880. Stock growers generally have realized very satisfactory returns, the result, to a considerable extent, of increasing care and good judgment shown in the improved breed of animals, to which more attention is constantly being paid throughout the West. The reasonable apprehension entertained by many. that the severity of the winter of 1880-1, with its almost unprecedented snowfall, would seriously diminish both the supply and the quality of the cattle receipts of the summer, was not realized. That immense numbers of cattle perished during the winter in the Western territories from lack of suitable shelter and food there can be no doubt, but the largely increased number held in reserve rendered their loss of little moment in the general course of trade. The export trade in Western fed cattle has increased very largely within the past few years, and that demand, being for only the best quality of stock, tends to stimulate growers to the improvement of their herds in every possible way, thus resulting in the production of better grades of all sorts. The export of fresh beef has been somewhat less than in 1880, but has absorbed, and is likely in the future to continue to do so, a very respectable percentage of the better grades of stock. The city slaughter of cattle during the year was over 550,000 head, the product of which was divided between city consumption and packing in its various forms. The packing of beef (cooked) in tin cans, has increased to one of the most important industries in the city - probably very much the larger portion of the city consumption is from parts of animals, the remainder of which is marketed in this manner. Experience has enabled those engaged in the canning business to perfect modes of preparing their goods for market, until, apparently, the point of perfection in this respect has been reached, rendering them worthy of the general favor with which they are received throughout the world.

The Hog crop of the Western States marketed in 1881 proved to be less than for the previous year, and although the receipts at Chicago have been less than in 1880, they have been fully up to the percentage of the whole number marketed in the West that has ever come to this city. The quality has been equally as good and the average weight substantially the same as in 1880, notwithstanding the greatly enhanced value of corn during the later months of the year. This fact has tended to essentially diminish the profit in liberal feeding, as the value of corn in hogs has scarcely kept pace with that of the grain itself. At the close of the year the market for hogs was about 1½ cents per pound higher than at its opening; corn being almost ½ cent per pound higher. No complaints of disease in swine have been heard during the past year that were worthy of special note, and our timid friends on the other side of the Atlantic may rest content that our meats are as healthy and inviting as any that can be produced in any part of the world, and infinitely better than such as are produced from the inferior quality of food upon which their home grown are necessarily reared. Certainly no food can excel the corn of the Western prairies for the fattening of swine, and none can compare with it as a question of economy to Western growers, and it being at once the best, the cheapest and the most available food material, it follows that the animals produced in the West might be expected to be, as they undoubtedly are, of a high order of excellence.

The city slaughter during the year has been about 5,200,000, nearly 700,000 less than in 1880. The pork packing business has been conducted by substantially the same number of establishments, but with several important changes in proprietors. The capacity of the several packing-houses is largely in excess of the business actually done, several of them doing little or nothing during most of the warm season, whereas all could be actively engaged throughout the year if stock to supply them, and a sufficient demand for the product, existed to justify continuous operations.

The number of Sheep received during the past year was greater than in any previous year, and it is quite probable that this class of stock may continue to be produced in increasing numbers, as many districts in the territory bordering on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains appear to be peculiarly well adapted to sheep raising.

THE PROVISION TRADE.

This trade has been rapidly increasing during the past few years; the increased supply and demand for actual consumption forming a sufficient basis for this statement; but the enormous increase in speculative operations in this class of property far exceeds those of what are termed the more legitimate trading. Speculation is confined almost exclusively to Mess Pork, Short Ribbed Middles and Lard, though no inconsiderable trading is done in Dry Salted Shoulders. Nearly all operations of this character are for a future delivery, and it is sometimes quite difficult to determine what might be considered the cash value of these commodities for immediate delivery. Prices for Mess Pork and Lard have averaged higher than in any year since 1876, but fluctuations, especially in Pork, have been far less marked than in 1880. The volume of speculation has exceeded any previous year in these commodities as well as in grain, the sources from whence speculative orders are received by our commission merchants reaching to almost every city and village in the country, the same parties frequently being interested in ventures in several speculative articles dealt in on the floor of the Exchange at the same time. This, of course, indicates somewhat of recklessness in the speculative mania, but it not infrequently occurs that a loss on one commodity is made good on something else dealt in at the same time.

In the early months of the year the attempts in France and other European countries to suppress the American meat trade were regarded by prudent observers as boding ill to the future of both demand and prices, and much anxiety was felt in respect to the outcome of the extraordinary position taken by several of the governments of those countries. Great Britain, our chief customer, and Belgium, our second best continental customer for Bacon and Hams, were the least disturbed, and have continued to take these products with but little hesitation on account of any rumored defects in their character. These two countries being so preëminently centers of manufacturing industries, the question of a cheap food supply for their operatives was of too much importance to permit their governments to hastily countenance prejudices engendered by the home producers of inferior and dearer meats, and which, upon careful investigation, which was promptly had, were found to rest on no basis of truth.

The demand for home consumption has far exceeded that of any former year, and has extended to every point in the country, and embraced every form in which the product of swine is placed on the market. The Stocks at the close of the year are not in the aggregate essentially different from a year since, though larger in Mess Pork and Short Ribbed Middles. The winter production promises to be something less than that of last year, but as the stock of Hogs is quite difficult to estimate, no very definite prediction in this respect can be relied on as certain to be fulfilled.

SEEDS.

No item of farm product has increased more rapidly in the Northwest within the past ten years than that of Flax Seed, the receipts at Chicago increasing from 1,233,485 bushels in 1877 (the first year it was reported separately from other seeds) to 3,973,982 bushels in 1881, the latter being about 16 per cent in excess of 1880. This comparatively new production in the West promises to be not only quite sufficient for the domestic consumption, but to become an important article of export as well. The city consumption of Flax Seed is increasing by the erection of new manufactories of oil, this industry now ranking among the most prominent of our local manufacturing enterprises. The crop of Flax Seed of the past year was somewhat damaged by the unfavorable weather of the autumn, and the receipts were not equal in quality to those of a year since. Prices in the early months ruled lower than in the corresponding time in 1880, but later have been very much higher, closing at nearly 20 cents per bushel higher for sound seed than a year since. The movement continued more active after the close of lake navigation than previously, the largest receipts of any month being those of December. Considerably more than half the shipments went by lake, adding quite an item to the demand for that mode of transportation.

Receipts of other seeds have been large, but less than in 1880. It is quite impracticable to keep the receipts of the various kinds of seed separate with accuracy. The trade has been quite active in both Clover and Timothy Seeds, these sharing with Flax in the tendency to operations of a speculative character. The market for Clover was of a steadily downward range of prices until the middle of August, when a sharp reaction set in, culminating in an advance of about $1.75 per bushel by the middle of the following month, since which there has been a decline of about $1.50 per bushel, closing at about $5.10 for prime seed. The course of prices in Timothy has been more steady, and the average somewhat higher than in 1880. Both crops were injured by dry weather, and again by the excessive rains at a later period. The trade in other seeds is not very important, and in aggregate is scarcely noticeable among other farm products.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

There were no specially marked features in the course of the market for Butter and Cheese. The receipts of the former were slightly less, and of the latter more, than in 1880. Prices for choice Butter have ranged very much the same as in the previous year. Cheese has averaged somewhat less and been rather more irregular in price. The receipts of dairy products at Chicago have considerably more than doubled in the past six years, and there is a strong tendency to still further largely increase this branch of farming industry in districts adapted to its most profitable development. The exports of the country have been 16,000,000 pounds less of Butter and 4,000,000 pounds more of Cheese than in 1880. The later months of the year show a very marked decline in the export movement of both.

OTHER FARM PRODUCTS.

The receipts of Wool, Hides, Potatoes, Beans, Broom-corn and Hops have all been larger than in 1880, the most marked increase being in Potatoes, the aggregate of which as reported was 2,386,105 bushels, besides a considerable quantity of new Potatoes received by express and fast freight lines not reported except under the general head of Vegetables. Prices of Potatoes have been fully sixty per cent higher than the previous year, and this with an essentially inferior quality of the Potatoes received since mid-The demand for Beans, the receipts of which have been nearly double those of the previous year, has been continuously active, at a range of prices averaging nearly a dollar per bushel higher. In both Wool and Hides prices for the first four months of the year were on a lower range than for the corresponding time in 1880, this being especially true of Wool. Later the difference was less marked, both, however, averaging lower than for the previous year. The Broom-corn crop suffered somewhat by dry weather in districts where it is most largely grown, and the general character of the product was inferior to that grown in 1880. The trade in Fruits, Vegetables and miscellaneous farm products has been large, although that in Fruits was restricted on account of a partial failure of the usual product resulting from the extremely cold

LUMBER AND COAL.

The lumber trade has been exceedingly active, with reported receipts far in excess of any previous year. It seems quite probable that the receipts by lake have been somewhat overstated for several years past, and perhaps always, the overstatement, if there be any, arising from the record being taken from custom-house entrance reports, which are usually stated in round amounts, indicating either an estimate or carelessness in reporting. The law in respect to government records of the coastwise trade is very defective, and lends but little assistance in procuring accurate statistics of the Shipments by rail have been more accurately ascertained movement of commodities. during the past year than ever before, as lumber is now weighed by the railway lines, and reports are based on the actual weight on which freight is charged. tions of feet are based on the estimate of three pounds to the square foot. green lumber would be too little and for dry too much. As an average, including all shades of dryness, and for hard wood as well as pine, it is assumed to be as near a cor-The city consumption cannot be accurately ascertained, rect basis as can be adopted. but it is not probably as much as the balance of receipts and shipments, as reported, would seem to indicate.

The receipts of coal and coke have also been larger than ever before, aggregating 3,399,427 tons, nearly 700,000 tons in excess of 1880, and more than double those of any year prior to 1877. The large increase in the consumption of fuel in the city indicates the rapid development of manufacturing industries more clearly than any other statistical fact.

DIRECT EUROPEAN TRADE.

The direct export trade has been less than for either of the two previous years, the falling off being mainly in provisions, from causes elsewhere alluded to. The direct export of both wheat and corn from this city have been somewhat larger; of seeds, hides, oil cake, considerably larger, and of oat meal and corn meal very much less.

TRANSPORTATION.

The chief feature of the transportation problem during the past year has been the practical disruption of the combination of Eastern trunk railway lines effected in 1879 for the maintenance of agreed rates to and from the seaboard cities. founded on facts or suspicions, both equally effective in respect to this question, which had been manifested in various ways for some months, finally culminated in June in a pretty general abandonment of nominal tariffs, since which it would seem that agents were more or less at liberty to make special rates as circumstances or their inclinations might dictate. These have been, in exceptional cases, as low as the basis of ten cents per hundred pounds from Chicago to New York, with rumors of even lower rates having been made. The contest extended to passenger as well as freight rates, these having been reduced to and maintained for several months at a lower point than ever before. The exact causes which resulted in the renewal of the old strifes are not entirely clear to the public, but sufficient is known to enable observers to reason out probabilities satisfactory at least to themselves. In the early spring there was an unusually free movement of breadstuffs down the Mississippi river for export via New Orleans; this movement was stimulated by the presence at New Orleans of more than the ordinary amount of ocean tonnage, especially of steamers brought to that port, in part by a heavy movement of material for railroad construction in the Southwest, and no doubt in part by the exaggerated statements of the quantity of Western produce likely to seek that route to market. Railroad freights eastward were held persistently and unreasonably to the basis of 35 cents per 100 lbs. from Chicago to New York, and a corresponding rate from Mississippi river points to Eastern seaboard cities. This rate had been established by the combination on the 22d of November, and remained unchanged until April 1. Railway managers interested in lines south of Chicago saw that this rate, in competition with the unprecedentedly low rates current on the river, was practically prohibitory of any considerable movement from river points by rail, and it is believed some concessions from schedule rates were made by those lines several weeks before the final rupture occurred. The Vice-President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and manager of its southwestern connection, submitted to the Joint Executive Committee of Trunk Lines an elaborate report on the subject of the river movement, in which he certainly did not understate the gravity of the situation, as it was, in his opinion, likely to affect railway interests. Whatever may have been the object of this report it certainly had the effect to impress upon the public the idea that this movement was of a character far more important than it had ever previously been, or has proved to be since. The impression was quite general that this report, which was promulgated about the 1st of May, was designed as an unanswerable argument in favor of a radical reduction in rail rates, which had on April 1 been reduced five cents per 100 lbs., and again on April 11 five cents more; this last reduction was, however, retracted a week later, and at the time the report was published the rate was firmly held to the basis of thirty cents, Chicago to New York. No concessions from this rate were ordered until June 8, when a reduction of five cents occurred, soon followed by rumors of a twenty cent rate having been accepted in special cases, and by the middle of June a general demoralization had set in, with the result previously noted. Later, in attempts to arrange a more satisfactory basis, it was developed that at least one of the leading railway managers insisted that the allowance of differential rates to the nearer terminal points, which had existed in all arrangements for many years, should be abandoned, and that in any rearrangement of mutual interests the rates of freight between the West and all prominent seaboard cities should be the same, and it is understood all negotiations have been declined unless this point is conceded.

The lines terminating at Philadelphia and Baltimore resisted this demand, and there seems, at this writing, but little prospect of an early compromise or arrangement of the disagreement. As to the proper adjustment of this question - which appears to be the basis upon which any permanence in rates is to be effected in the near future — the views of Chicago shippers are naturally divided, those having business connections with Philadelphia and Baltimore insisting on the equity of the differential rate, in favor of those cities, which has heretofore been conceded, while those whose business relations are more intimately associated with Boston and New York maintain the view that the interest of the West lies in the direction of equal rates to all of the competing seaboard cities, and cite the fact that for years the same rates have been granted to Milwaukee, to all Eastern points, as to Chicago, without protest on the part of Chicago merchants, although the difference in distance is substantially the same as between Philadelphia and New York, with the additional argument, against the equality of rates in the home case, that the business is done by two corporations, the Eastern lines necessarily moving Milwaukee shipments from Chicago at a lower rate than Chicago shipments to the extent that they allow the connecting line a charge for bringing the property from Milwaukee to Chicago.

So many other elements properly enter into a just determination of this question that the single one of a few additional miles in distance on a long haul ought not alone to be considered in arriving at its fair and equitable solution. The policy of adjusting freight charges on the basis of a given rate per ton per mile for any distance has been repudiated by all practical railway managers as being impracticable, and unlike unjust to the railway interests and to that of their patrons in general. No railway line has ever been conceded a lower rate for its service between two competing points on account of even an essentially longer line by its competitor for the same traffic. On the other hand, the assumption that a non-competitor for a given traffic shall be permitted to dictate the terms upon which that service shall be performed seems like an offensive encroachment on the inherent right of managers to conduct their business in their own way, subject only to the law and the just rights of their patrons and competitors. If the point at issue related only to export shipments, and the demand was made that through rates from the West to European points should be made, the same via either of the seaboard cities,—as has been tried and found impracticable,—it would call for little discussion as to its wisdom, but when that requirement mainly affects a local traffic the nature of the proposition is essentially changed.

The chief point desired by the commercial community in respect to the adjustment of freight charges by railway lines is that they shall be reasonable in amount, subject to as little change as circumstances will permit, and unbendingly uniform to all shippers of like commodities under like circumstances. These conditions cannot exist in such a contest as has prevailed during several months past and on many former occasions. And it is earnestly desired, in the interest of a reasonable certainty in the prosecution of business, that some just and permanent arrangement may be speedily arrived at which may give some assurance to merchants that their neighbor is not receiving freight abatements sufficient to enable him to conduct a business competition utterly ruinous to themselves, nor that the railway war will bring about rates by to-morrow enough lower than was paid to-day to absorb all or more than the anticipated profit on a legitimate and apparently judicious shipment, made under rates current and satisfactory at the time, and which the shipper had no reason to suppose would be reduced to his injury. The frequent recurrence of these wasteful contests, to be followed, as they almost invariably are, by a sufficient advance to make good the loss sustained in their prosecution, admonishes students of the railway problem that perhaps as great a necessity exists for the establishment by law of minimum charges as for the fixing of maximum rates to prevent extortion. And it will not be surprising if railway managers unitedly appeal to the law for the protection of themselves from themselves in this respect.

The lake and Erie canal carrying trade has been seriously affected by the railway disorganization. Grain carriers by water, if they have made both ends meet, could have done but little more. In addition to the low rail freights prevailing it occurred that at the season when shipments should have been at the maximum, speculation in grain so advanced prices in Chicago that shippers could not purchase it, and with millions of bushels held in store cargoes for shipment could not be secured for vessels lying at the wharf, even at the unprecedentedly low rate of one cent per bushel to Buffalo, and no inconsiderable quantity was taken by steamers of regular lines for the bare expense of loading and unloading, or practically as ballast. Some little relief was afforded to vessels by the ruling rates for the freight of coal and other West-bound commodities, and by the active movement of iron ore and lumber, but the season as a whole has been very unsatisfactory in results.

During the past year renewed interest has been developed in the project of securing a direct line of water communication between the Upper Mississippi river and the lakes at Chicago, and a very marked impetus was given this movement by the large and representative convention held at Davenport in May last. It is observable that this improvement as it is more fully understood is coming to be regarded as of much more importance to the trans-Mississippi States, and also to the Eastern States, than has here-tofore been appreciated, and it is hoped the increased interest now attaching to the work may result in its being so presented to Congress that its great merit as a work of National importance and character may be fully recognized, and that such speedy action may be taken as will insure its prompt inauguration and early completion.

The influence of such a line of water communication, as a regulator of freight rates throughout a large portion of the Northwest, is so manifest that it seems surprising that so great a degree of indifference has been manifested in it hitherto. true that previous efforts to secure National aid for the work have been embarrassed by suggestions that as a part of the improvement the present Illinois and Michigan canal should be deepened and enlarged to what its advocates term a ship canal. thing worthy the name of a ship canal must of necessity be of not less than about fourteen feet depth of water and a corresponding width; to secure this would involve the expenditure of many millions of dollars, and when completed would be of no more practical value for commercial purposes than a depth of six fect of water, that being about the maximum of depth on the Illinois river improvements completed or project-Hence, under no circumstances could a work of so large a capacity be made available for the movement of vessels requiring a great depth of water, except for a short distance, and its use by such craft, if not wholly impracticable, would be of very doubt-For any trade originating on the Upper Mississippi the larger work would be quite unnecessary, as certainly not more than six feet of water can be relied upon by any system of improvement in that portion of the river which is at all practicable. The widening of the present canal and its deepening so as to allow the passage of boats drawing six feet of water would be very desirable and all that there is any commercial necessity for, but even this should not be insisted upon as an absolute condition to the extension to the Mississippi river; this extension on the scale of the present work would be of great value, and would no doubt result in such joint advantages to the producers of the Northwest and the consumers of the Eastern States as to fully justify a National expenditure of many times its estimated cost. It can hardly be expected that Congress will cordially assume the prosecution of this extension while the present Illinois and Michigan canal remains in the control of the State of Illinois, and its use subject to whatever of tolls the State may choose to dictate. It is therefore very desirable that there should be no delay in tendering the present work, which brings no revenue to the State, to the National Government, on the condition that it be made available for the traffic which may be made tributary to it from a section of the courtry to which it is at present of no value whatever. As the city of Chicago has more interest in this projected improvement than any other one point, it behooves her merchants and real estate owners to exhaust all honorable means which may tend to secure its certain and speedy accomplishment.

The movement of grain down the Mississippi river, which attracted considerable attention in the early months of the year, very sensibly diminished as the season advanced, so that as an aggregate the entire movement of the year by that route was only about 83 per cent of what it was in 1880, and in the closing months was quite insignificant in amount. The export movement of flour by that route was but little more than half that of the previous year.

I am, Mr. President,

Your obedient servant,

CHAS. RANDOLPH, SECRETARY.

CHICAGO, January 1882.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

To the Members of the Board of Trade, Chicago:

Gentlemen,—The Rules of the Board provide that the Board of Directors at every annual meeting of the Association "shall make a full report of receipts and expenditures, properly classified, and an exhibit of the financial affairs, property and general condition of the Association," and also that they shall make an assessment on each of the members, an amount "which in their judgment will be sufficient, in the aggregate, to meet all estimated expenditures of the Association for the ensuing fiscal year," and that the amount so assessed shall be reported at the annual meeting.

In pursuance of this duty the Board herewith respectfully submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements of the year now closed:

The revenues of the Board, as will be observed from the foregoing, have been largely increased by the payment of initiation fees by new members, seventy-four having made application to so unite with the Association within a short time prior to the advance of the initiation fee from $1,000 to $2,500 in February last, and sixty-nine immediately preceding the later advance in October from $2,500 to $5,000.

During the year, in pursuance of your authority by special vote, the purchase of land for the site of a new exchange building has been consummated, and $40,000 has been paid therefor, as has already been reported to you. Later, by your direct authority, the sum of $100,000 has been paid to the board of real estate managers as the basis of a building fund. These amounts may with propriety be considered as not now held by the corporation, they having been practically covered by a deed of trust to the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company, executed as authorized by your vote in that regard; this margin being held by the trustee as security for bonds to be issued in furtherance of the building enterprise. After deducting these sums it appears that the Board is still in possession of nearly $100,000 in excess of its charter authority to permanently hold. As all this fund, together with that paid on behalf of the new building project, and even much more, has been realized from initiation fees of new members within the past few years, and hence has not been a tax on the general membership, the Board of Directors have believed they but reflected the general view of the membership in the desire that in some way, if possible, this fund, or at least the greater portion of it, should be devoted to the erection of the new exchange building, an object in which it is presumed all feel a common interest, and it is yet hoped that this desirable end may be accomplished legally and to the satisfaction of all.

Your Board of Directors had contemplated that at this meeting they would report an equitable distribution of a portion of this fund to the members in a form that should represent a personal interest of each, as an individual, in the building enterprise; but on further reflection it was deemed premature to consummate an arrangement looking to this end, and it is assumed that it will meet your views that this matter be held in abeyance for the present and that the fund remain intact, in the expectation that at no distant day it may be appropriated to the promotion of this object.

In the matter of legal expenses a much larger sum than usual has been appropriated during the past year. A considerable portion of this expenditure has been incurred in matters relating to the proposed new building, but in addition to this the Board has been made a party to numerous suits, some of which are still pending in relation to the exercise of its discipline, and to transactions of members of the Association, and also to recover memberships forfeited in past years for the non-payment of annual assessments as provided by the Rules. The appreciation in the marketable value of memberships in the Board has developed a surprisingly large number of ex-members who claim readmittance by the payment of a nominal sum, to the enjoyment of privileges forfeited by their own neglect. Some even have claimed the right to revive memberships voluntarily dropped years ago when they had no marketable value, and when a new initiation was less than the assessment for a single year. Your Board have deemed it a duty to resist all claims of this character, at the same time regretting that in a few special cases brought to their attention they were powerless to grant relief.

The membership at the close of the year numbers nineteen hundred and thirty-six; no membership has been allowed to lapse since the last annual report, and it is hardly probable that annoyance or embarrassment will hereafter occur on this account, the value of the privilege being now such as to insure due attention to the matter of assessments by all interested.

Since our last annual meeting death has made unusual inroads into our numbers. Eighteen who were with us at that time have passed away, against twelve in 1880, and ten in 1879. While some of those who have thus finished their earthly career have been young or in middle life, still the increasing numbers on the annual death roll suggests the fact that many of us are, in the natural course of events, nearing the time when we must bid adieu to the activities which have in so eminent a degree characterized the membership of this body. Among those for whom we have been called to mourn were some who had been associated with this Board since its infancy; and for the first time in its history the Board has been pained to learn of the decease of one still in membership, who had held the position of its president. The names of George Armour and of George F. Rumsey will long be held in most kindly remembrance as those of men eminent for their high personal character, and as among the few who from its days of insignificance had observed and had contributed in unusual measure to the development of this grand center of commercial power.

The country has experienced another year of prosperity, and that you have participated therein the financial condition of the Board indicates. Many changes have been made in the rules of the Board, an outgrowth of the increasing business of its members and the changing methods of trade; the admonition to vote early and often has been faithfully observed, at least so far as relates to frequency; and while we differ as to the wisdom of some of the legislation we believe that upon the whole we have advanced in the right direction. Especially worthy of commendation is the change in the manner of delivering property upon contracts whereby the element of risk is reduced and that of speedy settlement promoted, and even if susceptible of further improvement great credit is due your special committee for the intelligent performance of its task of revising this rule.

The important position we occupy as a commercial organization is, we fear, scarcely appreciated by the Board. It is unquestionably true that we have attained this position more by reason of the geographical location of our city than from any especially enlightened effort of our own. So intent are we in harvesting the golden crop at our door that we fail to give that attention to great practical questions of national legislation that we should, and it is quite within the range of possibility, if not of probability, that by a continuance of this policy of nonintervention the commercial supremacy which this city has so rapidly achieved may be imperiled.

In pursuance of the requirement of the rules previously alluded to the Board of Directors have fixed the annual assessment for 1882 at $20 on each member.

Respectfully submitted by vote and on behalf of the Board of Directors.

H. W. ROGERS, President.

CHICAGO, January 16, 1882.

^{*}This amount is the estimate of the Director of the Mint, after extended inquiry and investigation, for the year ended June 30. 1881. The same is assumed, in the above, for the previous year, although probably it is somewhat too large for that year. Silver is estimated at $1.164-11 per ounce of United States standard of fineness.

Showing the Specie and Paper Money Circulation of the Principal Nations of the World (not including China), and the amount of each per capita in the several countries.

Compiled from the Report of the Director of the United States Mint for 1881, and based on the latest authentic estimates.

*Includes $66.327.670 Silver Certificates.

From the above and companion statements in the late Report of the Director of the Mint it appears that there is in the hands of the people, i.e., outside of National Treasuries and Banks, Specie per capita as follows: In the United States $7.42 in Great Britain $17.21 in France $30.48, in Germany $10.21, in Belglum $16.27, in the Netherlands $9.20. In the United States, in this calculation, Specie in Banks other than National Banks is counted as in the hunds of the people.

Exhibiting the principal Nationality of Vessels entered at the Seaports of the United States, and showing the relative decline in American tonnage engaged in the foreign commerce of the country since 1860.

Note—Up to 1850 only the aggregate valuations in the several counties were reported to the State officers, and from 1852 to 1857, inclusive, a few counties returned only the aggregates; hence the details of Real Estate and Personal Property valuations are not complete for those years. In 1867 and 1868 the details of valuation are not entirely correct, owing to changes by the operation of the equalization law; since 1868 the valuations are as equalized. The total valuations in each of the several years are entirely correct and official.

The valuations for 1873 as equalized are largely in excess of any previous year. In 1874 some changes were made in the manner of equalizing the assessments, resulting in reducing all the valuations, but especially that of Railroad Property. Valuations for 1881 are but little if anything over twenty-five per cent of the cash value of the Real Estate, and even less on the Personal Property owned in the State.

The State Debt, as noted, represents it as it stood on the 1st of January in each of the several years to 1869: in 1869 and 1870, as it stood December 1; in 1871, as it stood December 31; from 1872 to 1879, as it stood December 1.

Note—From 1851 to 1862, inclusive, a Lamp Tax of half a mill to two mills was levied on certain portions of the city, and is included in the above Total Tax. The city de't as noted, represents it as it stood on February 10 in 1852 to 1854, inclusive; on February 1 in 1855 to 1864, inclusive; and on December 31 since 1874. Valuations for 1875 to 1884, inclusive, are by the County assessment, as equalized by the State Board of Equalization, and in some of these years does not include rallroad property.

PRICES OF HIGHWINES.

The following shows the current prices or assumed value of Highwines for each week during 1881. In reality very little, if any. Highwines, as such, are now sold in the Chicago market. Prices of the various classes of the Distilled Spirits, including Alcohol, are, however, made upon the basis of a valuation for Highwines, and during the year quotations for all forms of Spirits not rectified have been based upon a valuation for Highwines as indicated below.

The above are approximately the current rates of freight on the articles named during the time indicated; more or less deviation from these prevailed after April not entirely covered by the range given; as low as 10 cents per 100 lbs. on grain to New York was probably accepted in the late summer and autumn, and rumors of a similar rate prevailed in the closing days of the year.
